PRESS RELEASE

Play, marvel and explore at Mauterndorf Castle

From toll station to family museum, an experience with character

The trade route across the Alps once led straight through Mauterndorf Castle: It was an important toll station and gave the town its name. Today, the castle is a thrilling experience for young and old visitors, with numerous playfully designed stations, re-created scenes from the time of Archbishop Leonhard von Keutschach and the more than 700 year old defense tower, which can be visited during guided tours.

The sundial above the portal has long welcomed traders, scoundrels and travelers on their journey across the Alps: no one could avoid Mauterndorf Castle. Here you had to open your purse and pay the toll. The first documented mention of the castle as a toll station dates back to the year 1002. At the beginning of the 13th century, the construction of the castle began, including a forty-four meter high defense tower. Under Archbishop Leonhard von Keutschach, who used Mauterndorf as a summer residence, the castle complex acquired its present appearance. Mauterndorf Castle is one of the last three preserved toll stations along the "Via Imperialis", the Roman trade route from south to north. The defense tower in its good condition is unique in Europe and can be visited during (evening) guided tours.

Explore the castle on your own with the audio guide

Life-size figures - people in authentic attire, and animals - as well as re-enactments of the bustle of the castle, invite you on a journey back in time to the Middle Ages. The sightseeing tour includes the courtyard and the castle. In the stone cellar you will learn details on the topic of "Attack and Defense", in the entrance hall you will encounter "real" people performing their medieval professions and customs. In the wardrobe chamber, visitors can dress up in medieval costumes and a festive table is set in the Knight's Hall. Among the highlights is a guided tour of the defense tower with its twelve meter high entrance. The original use of the tower is recreated on six floors with a treasury, a dungeon, emergency quarters and a guard room. The audio-guide tour for adults and the one for children are available in nine languages.
